Vaupell is pleased to announce the addition of Mike Brescia as our new sales engineer focusing on metal to plastic conversion applications. Mike comes to Vaupell with over 15 years of industry experience having spent most of that time concentrating on the development of the Aerospace and Defense markets.

Mike was previously employed with Greene Tweed and Company located in Kulpville, PA. While working there Mike held many different positions which included: Injection Molding Class One Operator, Senior Customer Account Specialist and Plastic Project Coordinator for all Global Aerospace Groups as well as Defense Sales Representative.

Mike was one of a selected group to be a part of a spin off of Greene Tweed called Lancer Systems located in Allentown, PA. While with Lancer Mike held the title of Defense Sales Manager and was responsible for developing the defense market. Mike worked with various market leading OEM's within the small arms, UAV and ground vehicle platforms in assisting them with many metal to plastic conversion applications. Most notably Mike managed a project for a little over two years which lead to the successful development of the L5 translucent AR style magazine which is being sold today.

With Mike's diverse background, experience and specific industry expertise we believe he will be an asset to the team here at Vaupell and we are looking forward in realizing the value he will bring.
